Course description:

"AiA"

Arts in Action" is a five day workshop that promotes an active stand in society with one's work.

To accomplish this, we investigate into what is art and what purposes it can serve.

We also investigate participants' ideas, values and intentions and re-frame them through the language of contemporary art to bring the artist's work to the public sphere in an actively meaningful way.

It presents an opportunity to investigate what we really want to express and why and what for. In the process, it sheds a light into allegiances, values and commitments to the outside world.

Consisting of a mix of group discussions, individual tutoring, and hands-on work, participants will be engaged in self reflection exercises and will refine their aesthetics and technique through the making of a final art-piece that will be presented in an exhibition space.

Number of participant: Min. 4 – max. 8 (Applicants accepted from: DI, Jewellery and Metal, Ceramics, Glass, Media design, Theory departments)
